as we see it

Economy—at least until now—has hardly been one of our national characteristics. Americans, individually and collectively, are known throughout the world to be generous to a point of extravagance.

Television may change all that. We might even gain the reputation of being as thrifty as the French. And it will all have started because of some beaten-up old feature movies that have ground through TV station projectors so frequently that the sprocket holes in the film are as ragged as an Italian haircut.

The movies started out cheap and they keep getting cheaper, and that's quite an attraction for a station that has to fill 18 hours or so of programming each day of the week. Whenever there's a lull, on comes one of those old turkeys that Hollywood turned out as a "C" film to start with.

By now, word is getting around that viewers are fed to the eyeballs with the darned things. And this is where the economy comes in.

Some right resourceful lads are determined that none of the old features should be wasted. Why throw them in the garbage can where they belong? They can be saved!

How? Well now, if viewers are tired of seeing an hour or an hour and a half of this dogmeat at a crack, cut them up into fifteen-minute or half-hour episodes. Show them as three- or six-part serials. They'll take up programming time, they'll be cheap, and they'll be in a new form.

So that's what they're trying to do —hack up the features into itty-bitty episodes to make them palatable.

Ah, those economical TV people! They might even start everyone saving bits of string. Thrifty Americans! We never thought we'd see the day.

NEW YORK Bob Stahl reports:

HUMPHREY BOGART may kick off NBC's new Pontiac Theater series this fall with a dramatization of a PHILIP WYLIE short story. Though BOGART said, after last June's "Petrified Forest," that he'd probably do no more TV, he reportedly was so impressed with producer FRED COE's work on that show that he's willing to make an exception--and COE will produce the Pontiac series.

CBS heading towards international TV via the film route: Robin Hood is being filmed in England, Long John Silver, starring ROBERT NEWTON, in Australia; and March or Die, in which ERROL FLYNN plays a French Foreign Legion commandant, is in production in Spain.

Let's Take a Trip, off TV until Sept. 25, will return for a one-shot Sunday, Aug. 21, when it televises the Boy Scout Jamboree "live" from Ottawa, Canada . . . MARION MARLOWE just started a four-week engagement at Las Vegas at $17,500 per week--about 17 times what she made on the ARTHUR GODFREY shows.

It was JONATHAN WINTERS' own decision not to appear regularly on Here's the Show, the GEORGE GOBEL summer replacement. WINTERS thinks he needs more experience before taking on a weekly program . . . KATHERINE DUNHAM's dance troupe scheduled for guest spots this season.

LEO DUROCHER has an idea for a new TV series, presumably with a baseball motif. His agents are trying to line up sponsors for a fall start . . . Telefilm series in the works based on "Mrs. Mike," best seller several years ago about life in the Arctic. Nobody set yet for the title role but either RALPH BELLAMY or BARRY NELSON may play the male lead . . . PETER LIND HAYES and MARY HEALY, anxious to return to TV on a regular basis, are now cooking up their own show.

HOLLYWOOD Dan Jenkins reports:

The "Hot Mikado" may be a CBS "spectacular" next season, with NAT "KING" COLE in the lead . . . "Frankenstein" will be a Climax! entry in the fall . . . FRANK SINATRA and NBC are more than half-serious about a proposed half-hour weekly dramatic show in which SINATRA would play himself in his own home town. . . And JAMES DEAN and EVA MARIE SAINT will be the high-priced support for SINATRA in NBC's Monday, Sept. 19, "Our Town."

TOM D'ANDREA and HAL MARCH will complete the first 13 weeks of The Soldiers, after which MARCH will kiss the whole project goodbye. If the as yet unsponsored show sells, D'ANDREA will get himself a new partner.

Prince Of The Wild Frontier

Buddy Ebsen, An Ex-Hoofer, Rides To His Greatest Fame As Davy Crockett's Sidekick

It's a good thing Buddy Ebsen, in real life, is as easygoing and soft-spoken as George Russel (the sidekick of Davy Crockett, "king of the wild frontier")—the role he plays in ABC's Disneyland. Otherwise, he might be the most disgruntled of all the disgruntled actors in Hollywood.

Ebsen came within a Fess Parker of landing the Davy Crockett role himself. To an actor, of course, that is something like being the nuclear physicist who missed Einstein's Theory by two decimal points. But Buddy is taking it in stride.

"Missin' the part of Davy," he says in his Florida drawl, "is how I come to be George. The director and the producer were both pitchin' me for Davy, because I'd made a couple of Westerns at Republic with Rex Allen, so they knew I could act outdoors. I was even doin' some pitchin' myself. But Walt Disney—he couldn't make up his mind. Then he saw Fess doin' a bit in a picture called 'Them.'

"Somehow," Ebsen grins, "I feel Walt made the right choice."

True, he says, you don't hear the small fry singing, "Georgie, Georgie Russel, born in a gopher hole in Beverly Hills," but being just the "prince of the wild frontier" has its compensations. Disney has signed Ebsen to a contract as singer-dancer-actor—he'll play Russel in future Crockett films and will have an important part, in the fall, in Disney's daily Mickey Mouse Club. And of course Buddy is as big a hero in his own home, populated by five daughters, age four to 17, as Fess Parker.

That's not to suggest there's any rivalry between Ebsen and Parker. Matter of fact, Fess is Buddy's buddy and is buying a Beverly Hills home right across the road from the Ebsens.

Far from the wild frontier: Buddy and wife Nancy at their Beverly Hills home.

They've even written and recorded a song together, based on a Davy Crockett motto—"Be Sure You're Right, Then Go Ahead."

Although, until recently, most people who knew Ebsen at all continued

◀Davy Crockett (Fess Parker), George Russel (Buddy Ebsen).

Ebsen & Ebsen: Buddy and Vilma.

thought of him as a singer and dancer in such prewar musicals as "Captain January," he is, in fact, the lyricist of a number of published songs.

He started writing songs during lean days in 1947. A hitch in the Navy—if lieutenants serve hitches—and a postwar revival of "Show Boat" interrupted his movie career so seriously that he fell back on personal appearances, one of which took him to San Antonio, Tex.

"They had a saying down there, 'Come see me when the roads get better.' Wasn't nothin' wrong with their roads. Three-lane highways, same as everywhere else. It was just a sayin', but I made a song out of it about a fella goin' to ask his girl to marry him when the roads got better in the spring. I took it to Walt and he published it."

"Walt," of course, is Disney, whose music publishing house is a subsidiary of what Ebsen calls affectionately, "the mad mouse factory." Ebsen's relationship with Disney goes back farther—to 1935.

"I had a sweatshirt that didn't look quite right when I was making 'Broadway Melody,'" Buddy recalls, "so the dance director had them sew a Mickey Mouse on it. In those days a sweatshirt with a Mickey Mouse on it was a novelty, especially on a grown man 6 feet 3. Well, Walt saw it, and he never forgot it."

Ebsen rose from a job as a soda jerk in Penn Station to the chorus of "Whoopee" on Broadway in 1928. During the 1930's he and his younger sister, Vilma, were a world-wide hit as a dance team. They broke up when Buddy went solo in movies.

It was a TV flop, ironically, that got him started again in pictures. He made an unsuccessful TV "pilot film," Elmer Fix. A Republic producer saw it and put him in the Westerns that led to character parts in "Red Garters" and "Night People."

His Southern accent, he says, got him the jobs. He is a Floridian, the son of a professional dance teacher who moved the family to Orlando from Illinois while Buddy and his two sisters were still children. In Hollywood, he says, he nearly wrecked his career by taking voice lessons.

"I went to a protege of Madame Ouspenskaya's," he recalls, "and for three days after the only lesson I took, I couldn't speak a word."

Today Vilma is operating two dance studios in Southern California and Buddy, "set" for some time to come, lives in a hillside home to which "I keep adding as the family grows."

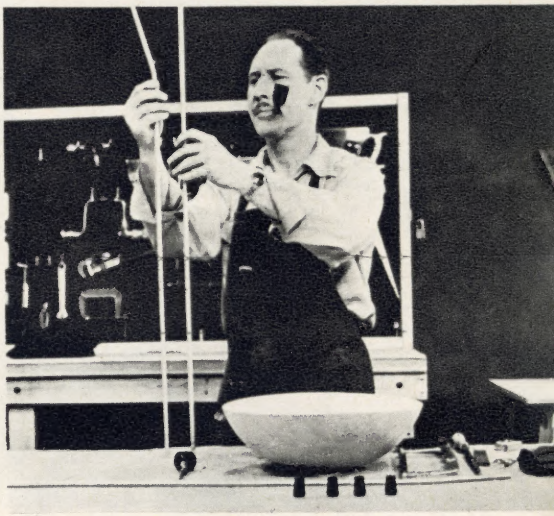
In "Davy Crockett and the Riverboatmen," scheduled for next fall, Ebsen is looking forward to dancing again. "I been doin' some research," he says, "and I find out that shuffle step of mine started on those flatboats along the Mississippi. Sho, man, I'm right back where I started."

DO IT YOURSELF

For That TV-Time Snack...

HERE'S A CADDY, EASY AND INEXPENSIVE TO MAKE

Bill Handy, who conducts The Handy Workshop on WTMJ-TV, Milwaukee, has devised this Snack Caddy. The average home owner, he says, can put it together in a couple of hours, at a cost of about $3.



Materials needed are: unfinished 15-inch wooden salad bowl; three 36-inch aluminum or steel rods; three rubber tips for bottom of legs; three more tips (bottoms to be clipped off) to form grommets around the rods just under the bowl, and a rubber collar (or piece of brightly colored plastic hose) five inches long, to hold rods together at the top. At right, Bill assembles his materials.

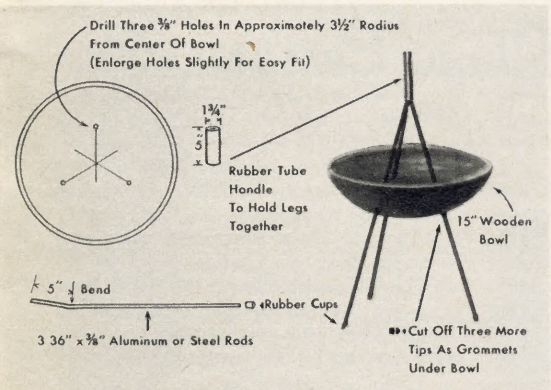


Diagram showing various elements of the caddy and their dimensions. Completed bowl can be stained, waxed or painted, as desired.

Caddy holds enough for the most ravenous. ▶

'Aloha' To Show Business?

HALELOKE IS CONCENTRATING ON A NEW KIND OF JOB

Of all the people purged by Arthur Godfrey in recent years, Haleloke is the most determined to say nothing but complimentary things about her ex-boss. Where others, like The Mariners, charge bluntly that Godfrey treated them shabbily or, like Marion Marlowe, imply as much, "Hale" (pronounced Holly) declares, "I take my hat off to him. He was a great guy to me when I was on the show."

Aside from that, Hale declines to discuss the firing. "It's all water under the dam," she says.

It would seem that Hale, who was brought here by Godfrey specifically to appear on his shows, was left high and dry by the purge, thousands of miles from her native Hawaii, with nothing but a fat bank account and a national reputation to keep her company. But she doesn't see it that way. "I was neither hurt nor bitter when it happened," she says. "But that's one of the things I don't care to discuss."

Hale, of course, prospered as much from her association with Godfrey as any of his one-time "Friends." She recently joined the staff of Orchids of Hawaii, a New York firm specializing in Hawaiian imports, as special counsel for the division that caters Hawaiian-motif parties. She was selected because "no other Hawaiian personality is so well-known in this country," according to Kei Yamato, president of the firm. And without Godfrey's shows, naturally, she would not be that well-known.

Immediately after the firing, Hale quietly vanished. Ed Sullivan, who makes a habit of booking Godfrey's fired "Friends" for his Toast of the Town, did everything but put out a search party. No one could find her.

Hale says now she can't understand what all the shouting was about. "I simply went to visit some friends. The Godfrey show goes off the air every summer and I had already planned my vacation. So I just decided to take it a little earlier."

Since the announcement that she had joined Orchids of Hawaii, Hale has been besieged with offers for TV guest appearances. She is free to continue her radio and TV work but she wants first to get her new job rolling. She accepted one date, however, as guest on Horace Heidt's special "Salute to Hawaii" show July 9.

Her job as a party consultant represents a complete change of pace for Hale, who has been a singer most of her life. "Most kids on the Islands grow up with singing and dancing," she says. "I turned professional just before the war, and got a job singing on 'Hawaii Calls,' a radio show. We all used to get up and sing in night clubs, just for amusement. Mr. Godfrey heard me sing and invited me to the States to join his show."

Godfrey spent much time in Hawaii during the war, Hale says. She met him during his second trip in 1950. "In Hawaii, the people like you for what you are," she says. "They pay no attention to celebrities. And Mr. Godfrey was especially well-liked there. He has done a great deal for Hawaii. I think he is the greatest booster we've had."

Except for recording some song albums with others on the cast, plus one with Arthur himself, Hale did no entertaining outside the Godfrey shows. "Mr. Godfrey and his family and all the kids on the show did everything possible for me when I first got here," she says. "I was a frightened girl in a big city. Jan (Janette Davis) was one of my best friends. She was awfully nice to me. I plan to continue seeing her and hope we can get together again as soon as I get settled."

Although she was "always treated very kindly by Mr. Godfrey" and spent much time with him and his family during her five years as a "Friend," Hale doesn't say whether she expects to see much of him from now on. At least she hasn't heard from him since the firing. When Orchids of Hawaii threw a party to announce her affiliation with the company, Yamato included Godfrey in the invitation list. He did not attend.

Her friend: Haleloke with Janette ▶ Davis, who helped in early days.

British Put TV Game On Trial . . . With Startling Results

The wondrous day of commercial TV is about to dawn in England, and even more wondrous—at least, to American eyes—are some of the programs being prepared for the dawning. Here's the first rehearsal staged to test the merits of Bury Your Hatchet, a weekly game in which two viewers, unable to settle a domestic dispute, appear before a court for a lighthearted judgment. A judge (each week a different celebrity) and jurors award a prize to the winner; a choice of penalties to loser. Frank Owen, a journalist, is prosecutor; entertainer Hélène Cordet, defense counsel.

Prosecutor Owen objects, Counsel Cordet, being French and feminine, cajoles.

Judge Edwards takes a look at Exhibit A—or, perhaps, Counsel Cordet's knee.

◀ Jimmy Edwards: British justice asleep.

All ends in confusion—how else? Two viewers, whose case was tried, sit in foreground.

In England, as in America, the man always loses. The victorious woman chuckles heartily as the loser pays penalty, trying to balance bucket of water on back.

Gotham Dateline

Come September, The Goldbergs will be back in our town for another season of window-shouting. Molly Goldberg, philosopher-matriarch of the Goldberg clan, will again be on hand, along with Robert Harris, Eli Mintz, Arlene McQuade and Tom Taylor. A new wrinkle: the Goldbergs are moving from their Tremont Avenue palace to a small American town to be known as "Haverville, U.S.A." where they will become identified with various phases of community life. Molly will join women's clubs and window-shouting may be at a minimum. Ch. 5 will carry the show on film, beginning Sept. 22.

Jean Darling, who's been turning up in Clubhouse Gang Comedies, has also turned up with a sleight-of-hand husband, the magician Kajar, who puts in an appearance on It's Magic, August 14th at 7 P.M., Ch. 2. Kajar promises to perform only one or two feet from the camera which should give the viewers an awfully close look at the hand that's "quicker than the eye." Apparently, few magicians want to take this kind of chance.

Jimmy Shearer and his Songs of Yesteryear seem to have caught the viewers' fancy. After several telecasts, and at last count, Ch. 13 reports that the fan mail totaled: New York: 7,679; N. J.: 4,938. Other counties: 736. Total: 13,353.

According to the A.R.B. ratings, Ch. 5's Looney Tunes was the most popular show in June for the lesser fry.

Ch. 4's Television Workshop, born an offspring of the Norman Brokenshire Show, comes into its own time-spot this Saturday at 7 P.M. The initial offering, called "Essays for '55," features authors Martin Levin and Howard Whitman reading from their own works.

Tandy Was Dandy

I have just viewed "The Fourposter" on Producers' Showcase. I can honestly say without any exception it was the best show I've ever seen on TV. Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn were ideal. The play itself was warm, tender, human; in every respect, wonderful.

Cronyn, Tandy

I have never written to comment on anything I've viewed but I'm sure many will hope as I do—a return soon of this superb play.—Mrs. Charles Hladio, Bernardsville, N. J.

Too Much Celluloid

I realize that I am figuratively attempting to "fight City Hall" in objecting to the great volume of TV entertainment being put on film. Filmed shows lack the warmth and spontaniety of "live" shows.

But the worst about the filmed shows is their ability to repeat—round and round. Even Disney is now on his third round.

Television started developing a fine staff of "legitimate" performers. Now we have that Hollywood touch destroying the freshness and brightness of what was a young industry.—Mrs. Seaman Herbert Nichols, N.Y.C.

Bugged By Insects

I don't think it was a bit fair to the soldier on the $64,000 Question, July 12, to ask him questions about insects when he chose "animals" as his category. There is a difference between insects and animals.—Arlene Donnelly, Paramus, N.J.

Comedy Shows Mourned

Have the programmers at CBS gone crazy? First they dropped Father Knows Best. Then they dropped My Favorite Husband. And, now Topper, a very good comedy, is going.—Mahlon H. Smith, Paramus, N.J.

On New York TV

I agree with Miss Broder (TV GUIDE, July 16) on summer TV. The warm months are a time for experiment and not for reviving dead pilot films. New York TV drama has a distinctive quality which cannot be matched by Hollywood. We should get on the band wagon and try to make New York the TV center of the world. —Cosmo J. Blanda, New York City.

A Good Mason?

I read in your TV Teletype that the Perry Mason series may be on television. I've read every book written by Earl Stanley Gardner, especially the Perry Mason mysteries and would love to see Jerome Thor play in the TV series. Mr. Thor is tall, soft-hearted and tough. I really feel that Jerome Thor is Perry Mason.—Mrs. Andrew De Lucia, Hamden, Conn.

Elena Verdugo

Max Liebman

Carol Reed

Dick Powell

Would you please tell me the name of the actress who played in "Strange Voyage"? Her startling resemblance to the girl who plays Millie in Meet Millie has brought up the question.—Walter Pypniowski, Bound Brook, N. J. [Don't be startled. They're both Elena Verdugo.]

Is Max Liebman, who is producer of the Saturday and Sunday night color Spectaculars, also in charge of Producers' Showcase on Monday nights?—Peter Froman, Baldwin, N. Y. [No, the energetic Mr. L. isn't involved in this one. Fred Coe supervises for NBC and there's a guest producer for each show.]

What is the name of the musical score played at the beginning and end of Files of Jeffrey Jones?—Helen Sacchetti, Harrison, N. J. [The theme is "Oriental March" and was written especially for the program. Incidentally, it's not available on records.]

My whole family would like to know what Carol Reed means when at the end of every show she says, "Have a happy."—Carol Ann Siciliano, Riverdale, N. Y. [It's Miss Reed's pet expression, the omission to be filled in by the viewer, wherever he is, whatever he's doing.]

Could I know the name of the theme song of This Is Your Life?—Nancy Morse, Middletown, N. Y. [Like the show, the number is called "This Is Your Life" and it's owned by Ralph Edwards. Not available on records.]

Please explain why none of the old "Golddigger" movies of the '30's are shown on TV. I would enjoy seeing Dick Powell in some of his wonderful musicals.—Mrs. F. E. Cruser, Princeton, N. J. [As yet, none of the major Hollywood studios has released their old films to TV. Most of the movies now on were made by independents. It appears that RKO will be the first of the major studios to change their policy. The "Golddiggers" films were made by Warner Bros. and they've not yet seen fit to turn them over for home viewing.]

Could you please tell me if the Star Playhouse drama of "The Girl I Married," July 26, Ch. 5, was an adaptation of "Happy Birthday, George," shown on Robert Montgomery Presents?—Mrs. Barbara Goldstein, Bronxville, N. Y. [Star Playhouse doesn't adapt.]

Lemonade stand proprietor Peter Murray, 10, learned about sales slumps early in his business career, but he hasn't been discouraged. The youngster got off to a fast start when he registered $13.50 in sales the night he opened his stand at 68th St. and Columbus Avenue. However, that night Peter's brand of lemonade got a huge promotion boost from WRCA-TV and a host of TV stars who helped launch the station's Junior Sales Club campaign by "premiering" Pete's opening over Ch. 4.

Since moving to a new location on West 62nd St. (sans TV promotion) Pete's daily take has dropped. Nevertheless, while the hot spell persists, his trade remains reasonably brisk.

Designed "to keep youngsters out of trouble during the summer months and to prepare them for the lifetime task of earning a living" the JSC provides boys and girls with kits containing instructions for starting and operating a summertime business.

They Never Had It So Good

TV Becomes The Patron Saint For Nation's Promising Writers

Thanks to TV—that electronic patron of the arts—many a former struggling young writer has been wafted all the way from garret to suburbs.

Cash isn't television's only attraction. Scripters who have experienced the great rewards of Broadway and Hollywood—Paddy Chayefsky, Horton Foote, N. Richard Nash—continue to write for TV, enjoying the challenge of a new medium.

But TV's dollars and cents, however modest, do help. And mostly they are modest. Considering TV's heavy use of 30, 60 and 90-minute plays, writers' incomes are surprisingly slim, usually under $10,000 a year. continued

Actors, Boxers—And Writers Grind Out Those Scripts

The answer to this seeming paradox may lie in the inability of most writers to turn out more than two or three scripts a year of the quality being sought by constantly-harder-to-please producers and script editors.

This is especially true in the field of hour-long dramatic shows, where only a select minority, like Chayefsky, Gore Vidal, Rod Serling and Reginald Rose, have really prospered. The eight programs in this category during the 1954-55 season used 343 plays, yet few writers contributed more than three scripts to any one series. Of 52 Kraft Theater plays, for example, Dale Wasserman and Charles Mergendahl wrote three apiece; George Faulkner, Ben Radin and Arthur Cavanaugh, two each; 40 different authors wrote the other 40.

The situation is different in the case of half-hour film dramas. Ten Hollywood shows buy approximately 400 scripts each year, most of them from a handful of writers. The 39 scripts used on The Loretta Young Show last season, for instance, represented the output of 10 writers or teams of writers. Seven were by Lowell S. Hawley, author and magazine writer.

To find their 39 or 52 scripts, story editors read from 500 to 1500 entries. A staff reader for the J. Walter Thompson ad agency, producers of Kraft Theater and last season's Pond's Theater, reads more than 20 unsolicited scripts each week. Three or four he passes on to story editor Ed Rice and his associate, Charles Jackson, who have been reading other stories. "And after all that," says Rice, "the script that gets on the air isn't always as good as we might like."

"Live" half-hour dramatic shows find the script problem even worse, perhaps because their limited time makes story telling difficult. Jackie Babbin, story editor for Talent Associates, producers of Circle Theater and Appointment with Adventure, says she interviews more than 200 authors a year and, for Circle Theater alone, reads 70 or 80 scripts a week. "And," she sighs, "if we're lucky, we might find one script that's usable." But, she adds, writers who master the half-hour format can grind them out in as little as two weeks.

The pay scale varies mainly according to a program's budget and author's reputation. In general, fees for hour-long shows range from $500-$750 (Robert Montgomery Presents) and $1000 (Kraft and Pond's) to $2500-$3000 (TV Playhouse and Studio One.) On occasion, a "name" writer, like Vidal, can earn up to $2000 merely for an adaptation. Talent Associates pays $750-$1250 for a Circle Theater script, and has paid as high as $500 for a first draft. The writer retains full rights to his work and can resell it to movies or stage.

In Hollywood, the Writers Guild of America, with 850 active and 425 associate members, is an important factor in setting script prices for telefilms. Its minimum rates range from $375 for an unsponsored half-hour adaptation to $1100 for a sponsored hour-long original.

Although some TV writers are frustrated playwrights or novelists, most come, says Ed Rice, "from out of nowhere." Eugene Francis, Douglas Taylor and Ian Martin, prolific writers of half-hour plays, are TV actors. Another actor-turned-writer is Wendell Mayes. (His first produced effort, "No Riders," received rave reviews, and within weeks, he was tapped to adapt the Charles Lindbergh book, "Spirit of St. Louis," for an upcoming movie.)

Mary Lacey, a producer's secretary at Screen Gems, sold a script to Ford Theater two years ago—her first—then promptly resigned and went to Europe to write. Ralph Mays, a Chicago machinist, sold a story idea to The Loretta Young Show for $500. J. P. Miller, who wrote several plays for TV Playhouse, was a reporter in Mexico, a professional boxer, a Spanish instructor at Yale and a salesman.

Although writers of half-hour shows remain comparatively anonymous, a few craftsmen in the hour-long field have established themselves as an elite whose names, in the TV listings, swell audiences. These include Chayefsky, Vidal, Serling, Rose, Foote, Robert Alan Aurthur, Tad Mosel and David Shaw.

Vidal, with eight brisk-selling novels to his credit, had little interest in dramatic writing. Then, in February, 1954, the producer of Studio One persuaded him to write a macabre script, "Dark Possession." Since then, he has written some 25 "signed" TV plays, plus five or six to which he affixed pseudonyms, because "I didn't like what they did to my script."

"A good writer can make a good living from TV," he observes, "especially novelists, who are accustomed to doing heavy work. TV is a wonderful place to experiment. A writer can tackle anything if he learns how to dodge around the 'forbidden subjects.' It's a great challenge." More than that, it's another market for capable writers who, with not too many exceptions, have been a hungry group since the invention of the alphabet.

They never had it so good!

Lowell S. Hawley, Loretta Young discuss a play he wrote for her last season.

Ex-actor Wendell Mayes, right, scored ▶ with first TV script, is doing a movie.

Just routine: Linkletter stops outside his bowling alley for a little chat . . .

FOR ART LINKLETTER

TVs Just A Hobby

His Businesses Range From Oil Wells To Ships —And A Charm School, Too

The average viewer, who may be inclined to dismiss Art Linkletter as "another of those emcees always tossing pies in someone's face," is, at best, woefully wrong. With Linkletter, a millionaire at 43, television is practically a hobby. Here are a few facts:

- He's a 50-50 portner in John Guedel Productions, owners of House Porty, People Are Funny ond Linkletter and Kids.
- He's o member of the syndicote that owns the Americon President Lines.
- He owns a lead mine in Colorado, a uronium field in Colorodo, o skoting rink

. . . then talks over problems with rigger Lee Richards at one of his oil wells . . .

. . . next, in his office, he looks over plans for his Disneyland amusement park photo concession, which promises to be a profitable one . . .

and apartment houses in San Francisco, and a bowling alley and hundreds of acres of real estate in Los Angeles. Nat ta mentian his share in 26 producing oil wells.

- He's a partner in Caroline Leonetti, Inc., a model-and-charm school.
- He's president of Touchplate, Inc., electrical equipment manufacturers.
- He's a partner in Royaltone, Los Angeles' largest photo-finishers, and has the photo concession at Disneyland park.

From these and other enterprises, Linkletter grosses about $450,000 a year—not bad for a man who started life as a foundling, a door-step baby raised by an itinerant preacher and his wife, both extremely poor.

But in the San Diego State College cafeteria he's still known as the champion Waldorf salad-maker of all time. He made enough of them to pay his tuition for four years and is, to this day, certified as an English teacher.

Trouble is, he hasn't time to teach.

. . . finally, confers with Caroline Leonetti (red hat) in their charm school.

Actor emcee and dancer guest: Charlton Heston swaps chitchat with Vera-Ellen.

Variety Hour

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

If it's true that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, Ed Sullivan should be strutting. Intentionally or not, NBC's new Colgate Variety Hour is following all the tried-and-true precepts for TV variety programs established by Sullivan's competing Toast of the Town. And the formula seems to be working.

The first few instalments took a leaf from Sullivan's book by introducing clips from new movies—unfortunately, films publicized earlier on other TV shows. This is a gimmick that can be overworked, providing advertising for movies rather than entertainment for viewers. But then the show hit its stride with a salute to Broadway song-writers Dick Adler and Jerry Ross. Sequences from their "Pajama Game" and "Damn Yankees" added up to a fine hour.

Under its system of using guest emcees, at least until fall, Variety Hour presented Charlton Heston on the first two shows. He did a good, workmanlike job, even though some of the acts he introduced were barely par for the course—although movie star Vera-Ellen, for one, scored in a dance routine. George Abbott, producer of "Pajama Game" and "Yankees," played host to give viewers some interesting backstage commentary about Adler, Ross and their twin hits.

York Productions, of which Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis are part owners, reportedly have some good things lined up for the show. Dean and Jerry themselves are scheduled to appear as performers in the fall and winter. If they're still a team, that is.—R.S.

Julius and the Debutones: they're enough to start the teen-agers squealing loudly.

The Julius La Rosa Show

It's hard to say about humility, but Julius La Rosa has picked up a good deal of poise and self-assurance during the past year, and it shows in the job he has been doing as Perry Como's summer replacement. If he isn't the greatest singer in the world—and he isn't—he can nevertheless handle songs competently, meanwhile selling himself as a likable lad who sets the teen-agers squealing.

Like the Como Show, the pace here is easy and informal, with no pretense of being a miniature spectacular. La Rosa has surrounded himself with the usual singing group—in this instance, the Debutones—and occasionally shores up the bulwarks with a Georgia Gibbs or an Eydie Gorme. Actually, he needs only an occasional guest, for he does a pleasant enough job of passing the time himself.

La Rosa's major fault is a minor one. He starts saying "Thank you" almost before a song is finished, and by the time he's said it five or six times, it's a little tiresome.—D.J.

FINE TUNING

By Ollie Crawford

Crops of new shows prepared for fall. As the days get shorter, the budgets get longer.

An oldtimer is a guy who remembers when a pilot film was an Air Corps movie.

A lot of new shows are based on occupations. There's one about a candy cook called "Man Behind the Batch." There's a series about a carpenter, titled "Make Room for Daddy." And a half-dozen people are working on an opus about a Western musician called "The Lone Arranger."

A couple of chiropodists have even come up with a "Toes of the Town" program.

The $64,000 Question is expected to have a lot of imitators. One guy already has come up with an even bigger idea called "The $65,000 Question." Then there's "The $63,999.98 Question"—a program for bargain hunters, and "The $64,000,000,000 Question," which will feature both Houses of Congress at budget time.

The whole thing started with that old Spanish program "Doubloon or Nothing." That was where the pirates bet you couldn't take a long walk on a short plank. It was the big Kidd show of its day.

World's Greatest Secondhand Clothing Store

Brooks, With 175,000 Costumes, Can Even Outfit An Elephant

Flo Ziegfeld's extravaganzas put New York's Brooks Costume Co. into show business, and not even an order for ballet skirts for a herd of elephants has been able to get it out. The famed old firm (founded in 1910) got its start by supplying uniforms for bands. Since those days, it has garbed thousands of stage and TV performers. On its three block-long floors of shelves, ready for rental, are 175,000 assorted getups, valued at $5,000,000. It stocks dressmaker's forms in the dimensions of many regular customers, so anything from a leopard's skin to a Tyrolean mountaineer's outfit can be whipped up on short order for them.

Who Will Be A Match For Disney? Which $300,000 for Judy Garland?

HOLLYWOOD . . . NBC and Pinky Lee are planning some fancy strategy, to meet Walt Disney's daily Mickey Mouse Club show, when fall comes. One entire parking lot in Burbank will be transformed into a tented circus over which Pinky will preside with lions, tigers 'n everything . . . CBS is using Edgar Bergen to challenge Disney in the battle for the ratings, with a filmed series about Hansel and Gretel . . . But ABC's Robert Kintner—who has Mr. Disney under lock and contract —smiles, licks his chops dreamily and can't understand all the fuss.

■ Nanette Fabray, on her way to my early morning TV show, was stopped by a cop who didn't know her or me and was very suspicious about all that make-up and fancy clothes at 5 A.M. . . . Nanette showed me the black bruises she still has on her shins and hips "where Sid Caesar kicked me into my cues."

Nanette Fabray: 5 A.M.

■ And another guest, Leland Hayward, who arrived exactly two minutes before we went on the air, told me about Burgess Meredith in the early days of radio. "He arrived at the studio too early, so went out to get something to eat and drink, and went visiting some friends. At 2:30 in the morning, Burgess suddenly screamed, 'My radio show!' and dashed to the deserted studio" . . . Audrey Hepburn and Mel Ferrer will do a 90-minute TV special with their stage hit, "Ondine" . . . And both NBC and CBS want to pay Judy Garland $300,000 for a one-hour "spectacular."

■ Red Skelton asked for a room at a hotel on one of the islands in Hawaii and was told no rooms were available. Red asked the desk clerk, "If President Eisenhower asked for a room, would you have one for him?" The clerk said, "Yes, we would." "Okay," Red replied. "He's not coming, so let me have his room."

■ I wandered on the set when Bill Williams was auditioning for a new show, and Bill told me, "After 104 films and two years of breaking ribs, riding horses and working 16 hours a day (in Kit Carson) it was too much for me, and I got out". . . Richard Carlson had a call the other night from his I Led Three Lives producer. His young son answered the telephone and shouted into the mouthpiece, "Daddy is watching The $64,000 Question. Don't bother him!" and hung up.

■ Mark Stevens was telling me that after a hard day of shooting Big Town, he went home and into the nursery to kiss his sleeping daughter good night. As he started to tiptoe out, the little moppet said sleepily, "Daddy, don't go. Sing me an alibi."

NEXT WEEK: EARL WILSON

Capitol Hill has new wrinkle in public service plugs. Brain child of Station WATV, Newark, N.J., it calls for New Jersey's Senators and Representatives to rotate in filming half-minute TV "spots" promoting such causes as March of Dimes and Red Cross. The spots are being made in the Congressional Radio-TV Studios. TV stations in other cities are mulling the idea.
